It was a pleasure to have the opportunity to review the portfolio for Rebecca Elinich this year. I was quite impressed by her academic resume highlighting her devotion as well as professional experience in the field of Multimedia Communications. It is quite evident that Rebecca has a lot to bring to the college as well as the classroom. Her passion and willingness to brave this brand new frontier into gaming and multimedia communications is contagious, and I have been fortunate enough to discuss the potential to collaborate with her on some projects. Her portfolio is well organized and includes all the necessary components for improvement of teaching and professional growth.

Within the college and her department, Rebecca is active as a volunteer for committees and departmental projects, contributing her expertise where needed, as well as participating in various Classroom Assessment Techniques and Discipline Assessments. She has been very active on campus through the opening of a new innovation lab as well as being the advisor for the Geek Culture club.

Rebecca has a variety of different assessments to accompany her course lectures and aid the students in their successful completion of her course. It is evident that much time, thought, and effort was put into each one, keeping in mind the needs and diversity of her students. Her SOSOs clearly show that students respond well to her teaching methods, which include in class and online assignments, encouraging student questions, and challenging students with real-world examples to enhance equity and diversity in the classroom.

I highly recommend that Rebecca's portfolio be accepted and hope that she continues to strive to reach her future goals. She has been a wonderful addition and asset to our campus.
